

ASIA PACIFIC JOURNAL OF POLICE & CRIMINAL JUSTICE

CALL FOR PAPER

Asia Pacific Journal of Police & Criminal Justice (APJPCJ) – formerly, Asian Policing - is a peer-reviewed scholarly journal that is published twice a year by the Asian Association of Police Studies (AAPS). The journal aims to provide a meaningful forum for exchange of knowledge, information, and research outcomes among academicians, researchers, practitioners and policy-makers on all aspects of police and criminal justice in the Asia-Pacific region. With the unique regional focus, the primary emphasis will be on comparative perspectives among countries in Asia, North America, South America, and Oceania.

The journal publishes theoretical papers, conceptual papers, empirical research, in-depth literature review, and comparative studies that significantly contribute to the knowledge of police and criminal justice in the Asia-Pacific region. Practitioners and policy-makers also are encouraged to submit articles focusing on new ideas, new policies, and the evaluation of innovative strategies. Analytical book reviews will also be considered for publication.

Manuscript Submission Guidelines

Manuscripts must be in English, double-spaced with references, tables, and figures on separate pages. Manuscripts should not exceed 35 pages including the abstract, notes, tables, figures, appendices, references, and other material. The authors' names should not appear on any place of the manuscript except the title page and the biographical sketch page to maintain anonymity during the review process. Manuscripts must comply with American Psychological Association's (APA) guidelines for documentation and referencing. For further information, please refer to the manuscript submission guidelines on the AAPS website at <http://aaps.or.kr>.

Submission Method

Please submit your manuscript via e-mail as an attachment to Sunghoon Roh, Editor-in-Chief at editor@aaps.or.kr. Manuscripts submitted electronically must be in the original word processing format, and saved as either a MS Word file (*.doc, .docx) or a Rich Text Format file (.rtf).
